EVERGRANDE CRISIS

Chinese property firms suffer fresh downgrades

ANDREW GALBRAITH AND MARC JONES
Shanghai/ London, Oct 13

THE RUMBLING CRISIS at China Evergrande Group and other major homebuilders drove debt market risk premiums on weaker Chinese firms to a record high on Wednesday and triggered a fresh round of credit rating downgrades.

Evergrande, which has more than $300 billion in liabilities and 1,300 real estate projects in over 280 cities, missed a third round of interest payments on its international bonds this week, and other firms have also warned they could default.

Rating agency S&P Global delivered fresh downgrades to two of the sector's bigger firms, Greenland Holdings — which has built some of the world's tallest residential towers — and E-house, and warned it could cut their ratings further.

The $5 trillion property sector accounts for around a quarter of the Chinese economy by some metrics. In the clearest sign yet that global investors' worries are growing, the spread — risk premium — on investment grade Chinese firms, which tend to have the most solid finances, jumped to its widest in over two months.

The spread on the equivalent high-yield or 'junk'-rated index that the likes of Evergrande are part of surged to a new all-time high of 2,337 basis points. That drove the yield — which reflects how much firms would have to pay to borrow — to an eye-watering 24%.

"We see a risk that a disorderly correction in the property market could cause sharp price declines, hitting the personal wealth of homeowners," Kim Eng Tan, a credit analyst at S&P Ratings, said in a report.

"Such an event could also contribute to large-scale losses by investors in wealth management products, and the contractors and service firms that support the developers."

Evergrande did not pay nearly $150 million worth of coupons on three bonds due on Monday, following two other missed payments in September. While a 30-day grace period means the company has not technically defaulted, investors say they are expecting a long and drawn-out debt restructuring process.

Bonds issued by developers including Shanghai Shimao, China Aoyuan Group and Country Garden Properties Group fell between 1.6% and 7.4%, according to exchange data, while Kaisa Group — the first Chinese real estate firm to default back in 2015 — saw some of its dollar-denominated bonds drop to as low as 35 cents on the dollar, pushing their yields to nearly 60%.

Kaisa has $3.2 billion of international bonds to repay next year, second only to Evergrande, which has $3.5 billion.

An equity sub-index tracking A-shares of property firms fell 0.7% compared with a 1.2% rise in China's blue-chip CSI300 index.

"We continue to maintain an underweight position in the real estate sector for our China equity portfolios," said Virginie Maisonneuve, global CIO equity at Allianz Global Investors. "We have no plan to add in the near-term," although she added Beijing should be able to contain the problems.

Airlines in Asia ramp up flights, offers as curbs ease

ASIA-PACIFIC AIRLINES HAVE lost billions of dollars this year, with jets grounded in Covid-19 transportation freezes. Now, as some of the world's strictest pandemic-related travel rules begin to ease, they're ramping up flights and ticket offers.

Asian travel agencies and carriers told Reuters they're seeing a surge in bookings and travel enquiries as countries like Malaysia and Vietnam allow domestic flights to resume from this week after months of strict lockdowns.

India is lifting a domestic capacity cap, while Singapore, Thailand and Fiji are opening without quarantine to vaccinated international travellers from select countries.

While airline industry group IATA does not expect a significant improvement in Asia-Pacific international travel until "later in 2022" — predicting cumulative losses of $11.2 billion this year, narrowing to $2.4 billion next year — carriers from AirAsia Group to VietJet Aviation, Singapore Airlines, Fiji Airways and Qantas are already increasing capacity.

"The most important thing is practically all governments in the Asia-Pacific region with maybe one or two exceptions are abandoning their Covid-zero strategies and moving to a sort of Covid-normal framework," said Association of Asia Pacific Airlines director general Subhas Menon.

"Vaccination rates are also beginning to ramp up."

While curbs are easing, a full return to normal operations is a long way off. IATA estimates global aviation industry losses from the pandemic will be a towering $200 billion for 2020-2022, and losses in Asia alone were close to $50 billion in 2020.

International travel in the Asia-Pacific region was at around 4% of 2019 levels in Au-

Putin: Russia can help Europe, isn't using gas as weapon

REUTERS
Moscow/ Brussels, Beijing, October 13

PRESIDENT VLADIMIR PUTIN said on Wednesday that Russia was not using gas as a weapon and was ready to help ease Europe's energy crunch as the region's bloc called an emergency summit to tackle skyrocketing prices.

Energy demand has surged as economies have rebounded from the pandemic, driving up prices of oil, gas and coal, stoking inflationary pressures and undermining efforts to cut the use of polluting fossil fuels.

China, the world's second biggest economy and its biggest greenhouse gas emitter, has boosted coal output and imports as domestic coal prices have hit record levels and power stations have struggled to keep the lights on.

The energy crunch has amplified Wednesday's call by the International Energy Agency for tripling investment in renewables to steady markets and fight climate change.

Japan's Liberal Democratic Party pledges to double defence spending

TIM KELLY & JU-MIN PARK
Tokyo, October 13

AN UNPRECEDENTED ELECTION pledge by Japan's ruling party to double defence spending underscores the nation's haste to acquire missiles, stealth fighters, drones and other weapons to deter China's military in the disputed East China Sea.

The Liberal Democratic Party (LDP) included a goal of spending 2% of GDP — about $100 billion — or more on the military for the first time in its policy platform ahead of a national election this month.

Experts don't expect new Prime Minister Fumio Kishida to double spending anytime soon, given Japan's debt-saddled public finances and a pandemic-stricken economy. But it is a sign that the pacifist nation could over time abandon a commitment to keep military budgets within 1% of GDP — a number that for decades has eased concern at home and abroad about any revival of the militarism that led Japan into World War II.

"LDP conservative leaders want the party to give it up," said Yoichiro Sato, an international relations professor at Ritsumeikan Asia Pacific University, referring to the de facto spending cap, which he called "sacrosanct for Japanese liberals." "They are setting the direction, that is what conservatives want to do," he said.

The United States has been pushing key allies to spend more on defence; an increase to 2% of GDP would put Japan in line with pledges by North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) members.

The hawkish notes from the LDP come as Japanese public sentiment shifts away from concerns about rearming to growing alarm over China's military assertiveness in Asia, particularly toward Taiwan.

In a survey of 1,696 people conducted by the Nikkei business daily at the end of last year, 86% of respondents said China posed a threat to Japan, more than the 82% who expressed concern about nuclear-armed North Korea.

"Putting this in the manifesto is a recognition of the need to garner public support for required defence policy changes," said Robert Ward, a London-based researcher at the International Institute for Strategic Studies. "The direction of travel is now set."

Japan's military strategy is focused on defending territory along the edge of the East China Sea, where Tokyo is locked in a dispute with Beijing over a group of uninhabited islands.

The Okinawan chain, Taiwan, and islands stretching down through the Philippines form what military planners dub the First Island Chain, a natural barrier to Chinese operations in the Western Pacific.

With an additional $50 billion a year, Japan could buy more American equipment, including F-35 stealth fighters, Osprey tilt-rotor utility aircraft and surveillance drones, as well as domestically made equipment such as amphibious landing craft, compact warships, aircraft carriers, submarines, satellites and communications gear to fight a protracted war.

"The Self Defense Force is well trained and well equipped, but its sustainability and resilience is one of the most serious problems," former Maritime Self Defense Force admiral and fleet commander Yoji Kodama told Reuters.

Japan's defence ministry also wants money for an indigenous stealth fighter, and missiles that can strike enemy ships and land bases more than 1,000 km away. The country is building up cyber, space and electromagnetic warfare capabilities.

"Japan wants to acquire very sophisticated capabilities in a variety of areas," Thomas Reich, the country manager for BAE

Systems, said during a briefing on Tuesday. "What's in the budget and where it's going are the things that really attract us." The speed at which once-dovish Kishida has fallen in line with the national security agenda of conservatives has surprised some observers. But he is carrying on policies pursued by former Prime Minister Shinzo Abe and supported by conservative lawmakers who helped him win the party leadership election last month.
